

DRAGONS LOVE TACOS

ADAM RUBIN

SUMMARY

Dragons LOVE tacos! But don't make them spicy. They love all the ingredients of tacos, no matter what kind of meat there is in the tacos. They love all the ingredients of salsa, too. But as soon as that salsa is too spicy they get tummy troubles and then... uh oh! What will happen when the dragons tummies get upset?

Questions:

1. Would you guess that dragons love tacos? Can you tell what someone likes just by looking at them? Can anyone like any kind of food? Should you try new kinds of food even if it looks weird to you?
2. Do you like tacos? Does everyone like tacos? Do you like your tacos spicy or do you not like spicy food? Is it okay that everyone likes things differently? Can you still be friends with someone even if you don't like the same things? Can you become friends with someone because you DO like the same things?
3. Do you love parties? Why might someone not like parties? If someone is shy and is uncomfortable at parties, how can you help them feel better and be more included? Do they want to be in the middle of everything with everyone, or maybe just off to the side with one or two friends?
4. Would you like a taco party? What kind of party would be the best kind of party to you? Would that party be the worst party to someone else? If you have a party, should you provide a variety of things so everyone can have a good time?
5. How do you think the dragons feel when the boy feeds them spicy tacos? Did he do it on purpose?
6. How do you think the boy feels when the dragons burn his house down? Did they do it on purpose?
7. If you make a mistake and it hurts someone or ruins something or theirs, what should you do? If something is broken, should you try to fix it or replace it? How would your friend feel if you broke something important, even if you said you're sorry? If you can help fix it, should you?